Legal training opportunity

HOWLETT CLARKE solicitors has announced that Roger Hylton and Jane Quinn have been awarded places on the firm's solicitors training programme for 2008.

Roger joined the firm in September after graduating from Sussex University. Having completed the Legal Practice Course at the College of Law (London) in June 2007, he worked for a year as a paralegal at a firm in London.

He said: "What excited me about Howlett Clarke was the fact that the firm is steeped in history and has very close links with the community. It is also innovative and progressive and has a strong team focus.

"I am delighted to be working for a firm whose ethos is centred on the provision of best service for its clients.

Jane moved from the political arena into law having previously worked both in Westminster for an online political journal and at the Stormont Assembly in Belfast as a political adviser.

She said: "I am very happy that Howlett

Clarke has given me this invaluable opportunity to participate in its trainee programme.

"Having already worked in the firm, I know how friendly and professional it is and know I will receive fantastic training here."

Howlett Clarke's solicitors training programme is now in its eighth year and aims to give trainees a depth of experience within a wide range of disciplines and the opportunity to work under the supervision of the firm's partners.
